

Hello! My name is Julieanna Ramos. I'm from San Antonio, Texas. I'm currently a first semester senior majoring in communications. As I have grown a little more in my relationship with God and Jesus, I would say Jesus is someone I look to when I am blessed and even when I'm at my lowest. What I dream of doing with my life is graduating with my masters in marketing in a couple of years and hopefully working for the NBA or NFL in public relations. As I go on hopefully I'll settle down and eventually have a family of my own. I just hope to bring a good impact to women in sports because sports is a man's world. A person I admire in my life is my mom. She is my best friend and has given and pushed me the most in my life. A reason why I admire her is because I grew up kind of poor but she gave up a lot of time and money to get me into the best volleyball clubs that were fit for me. She went to every game and practice growing up regardless of how tired she was from work or how much money she had left for gas. Because of her and her sacrifices, I've played college volleyball in Colorado and now New York. She still watches every game no matter where she is. On my worst days she still will sit down with me and hug me like she did when I was younger. Like I can never be too old for her love. That's why I admire her most in life.