Who Are You

My name is Janiya Burton. I am 19 years old and a freshman majoring in psychology at the moment here at Alliance University. I am the oldest sibling out of 3. I was born and raised in Baltimore Maryland. Moving from a small city to New York was sort of a culture shock, but I am blessed to be the first in my family to attend a college out of state and potentially be the first to graduate college. I am majoring in Psychology for the moment because of the max capacity of nursing students, but I intend on switching my major to nursing eventually. Jesus is my heavenly father. He is my peace, he is what keeps me going. Jesus is my strength, my healer, he is my Lord and savior through justification, sanctification and redemption. I dream of having a career in the medical field as a nurse and being successful enough to provide a comfortable life for me and my family. I dream of becoming as close as possible with God and strengthening our relationship all my life. I admire so many people in my life, My mother because she is the true definition of self sacrifice. I admire my father because he puts his family on his back and doesnt let it break him, even if he is stressed or tired he still works everyday to provide and still makes time to spend quality time whenever he can. I admire my grandparents , my grandmother and late grandfather. because they were the perfect role models and showed me what having Christ in your life can do for your family and you as an individual.
