

Tenicka Clunis

PSY 101- General Psychology

1/30/2023

Question 1.

The behaviorists mainly use animal in their experiments, because animals and humans have similar characteristics. For example I once watch a documentary where a monkey was the subject of study, for medical treatment and the effect of a new medication. These animal live has a family or group, where the females take care for the young, and they take care of each other.

Question 3.

Noam Chomsky is an American linguist, he is also one of the initiator of the field of cognitive science in psychology. He also majored in philosophy, social critic and cognitive scientist. However Linguistic scientist is eclectic published, each of the topic in his field and on complications with disapproval and America policy.

Noam Chomsky is known as commonly known as helping to spur the psychological future revolution within the human science. Although he is anti-interventionist and anti-war he has one of the solidest voice contrasting conflict.

Question 7.

Behavioral and Humanistic tactics both have ways of helping us to understand and treat abnormal behaviors. For instance, they both propose different prospects like having a choice and having no choice at all. Each concept proposes different admittance that either receive or discard the scientific study and confirm the importance of the environment or inherent on human behavior. Behaviorism is based on the molds that behavior is learned and that behavior can be change. While humanistic repudiate that scientific arrangement that is contributed by behaviorism and understands that individuals are shape by an inherent drive to form themselves.

Question 8.

The five trait dimensions within the five model are commonly use in research and study personality. The five factor model was within the late 20th century, these aspects have been used to ration, and develop a better understanding of individual difference in personality.

Question 10.

Forensic psychology can be defined as a specialism within the field of psychology that represents the mixtures among psychology and law. Forensic psychology can be employed in a diversity of sessions, including schools and prison assessment, making sure that each individual is in a stable state of mind. If the individual is not in a stable state of mind a treatment will be will be recommended.