

The trade in the 1500's of black pepper began in India and was traded as a luxury commodity to Europe, Venice and Asia. The black pepper was used in food as a way of showing off because it was rare to indulge the senses with it. However once it was common it was no longer a luxury commodity. Above is the map of the route traveled by merchants to trade this commodity.

www.wikipedia.org