What do Iemitsu's decrees compare to those of Kangxi and Peter the Great in terms of their mixture of practicality and symbolism?

Iemitsu's decrees were compared to those of Kangxi and Peter the Great since they shared a desire for Westernization but held distinct cultural perspectives. In regards to their practical differences, Kangxi was more interested in establishing new calendars, technologies, maps, and other things. Peter the Great, contrasted with the hand, was more mostly about military technology, blacksmithing, shipbuilding.
