Just Mercy 1-5

Stevenson graduates from law school then he becomes a full-time employee at Southern Prisoners Defense. He helps defend them whether or not they committed the crimes they were accused of. He is then helping out families of the accused, Stevenson talks to his neighborhood about the racial injustice going on in his neighborhood since he got stopped once but then was let go.

Stevenson then gets a call from a man that is on death row facing execution for a false accusation of sexually assaulting a girl that was married with children. Stevenson then meets his family and rushes to the prison to meet him even though he may not be able to save his life, Stevenson says that the case was constructed all as a lie. Stevenson then tries his best to defend Walters' innocence after realizing he didn't commit it and the black community in Monroeville have all been burdened.
