The Literacy Narrative - My Early Writing Life

My writing and reading life is not longer than everyone, maybe because my parents tell me to force on my future's job and study is important, so the book most I read is educational book, and it is kinda boring and not helping for my writing and reading, and after I reading these, I really don't want to read other book that is not educational genre, but I still want to reading and writing something different, it just like my first writing life, but it is ending not well, and it also affect how I not writing in future.

In my reading life in child, I read some famous novel in the world on that time, even I just reading some beginning part, because I not accept read some book that longer than fifty pages, or some book that don't have a lot of picture, and that make me missing some really good book that I should read, but in my age of teenage, I start interesting reading some video game fanfiction, because I just enjoy to reading those thing that what happen in different way, even I found a lot of fanfiction is never finish or not very good, but it make me thinking I should writing one of fanfiction, and of course I didn't writing anything before, but I don't thinking too much on that time.

So the first thing I write is in school, in elementary school, I have been required to write diary, and words request not for too many, maybe not longer than one hundred words, and the content is just for daily life, or how I been in the whole day, very simple, but the force to write diary make me not very like to writing, because I don't know how to think write new stuff, also I don't know how it is connect to my future, also I must write with my hand, because in that time computer not common, after the time I finally don't need to write diary, I kinda just not like to write anything.

At junior high school, my homework include composition, and that is also using for quiz and exam, so I still need to write some stuff to pass class, but this time the word I require to write is based on the title, and some hint to tell you what you should write at least five hundred words, it just feel like write your option, but with time limited, I must think fast, so I still don't like writing for that time, because it just for homework and test require.

The first time really let me enjoy writing is my age at fourteen, I discover a video game fanfiction website, I am not going to write about which one because I don't want to remember a lot of thing, anyway I just go to there and see some fanfiction, but a lot of have some interesting opening but after few chapter it just no continue, and that mean no ending, I really hate to see this, so I thinking why I just write one fanfiction to for fun? And I will make sure I can write to the end, I really thinking about that on that time, even everything goes wrong after few month.

So I really do this, and I use third person's view writing my first fanfiction novel, and first I just need some view, because it beginning I just want attention, and maybe people will be my friend, but I don't know I actually writing so bad, like dialogue too short and kinda pointless, and story make no sense and boring, and I then I just writing some really bad thing and make that website look bad, after that I just lost friend and banned from that website, even nobody really banned me, just for word banned, but I still can't go back to there after half year, also I apologies to everyone.

So that experience let me know don't have faith in something you want for the first try, but I still want to try writing if I want, but I must think more about how to write good things, and not force on view, or everything will be worse.
