What rights did people have ?

Jahangir's chain of justice.

How was the power disturbed?

Promotion of loyal power legitimately to control through map, political, cultural context, military and symbolically. They use drawing of maps to make it seem that they were more powerful than what they were. Jahangir built on his father's foundations of excellent administration, and his reign was characterized by political stability, a strong economy and impressive cultural achievements.

List the similarities and differences between the hierarchies in this chapter and our form of government today

One similarity between the hierarchies in this chapter and our form of government today is that both set restrictions and regulate their trade and transport of commodities and one difference between the chapter and today's form of government is that the private owners and sectors in the economy are regulated by the government to prevent all monopolistic business practices and in the times of the chapter there were no such restrictions.
