

Discuss your level of participation in the pre-group planning session.

1. Were you an active participant? Yes, I was an active participant in the pre-group planning.

Why or why not? I volunteer to be the first group leader from class on 1/28/23. I created an outline for what topics needed to be discussed in the pre-group for creating the group.

What were your feelings during the pre-group planning exercises? I felt that each person in the group had ideas to add to the group to build the different areas discuss. Each person came with different ideas and express their agreement or disagreement with a particular concept for the group.

2. Did anyone in your group seem to emerge as the leader of the session? Please describe this process. I volunteered to be the first leader from the first meeting of the group. Everyone in the group was in agreement with allowing me to be the first leader of the group for the pre-planning and engagement portion of the group.

3. What are your thoughts about your ability and comfort level with leading this group during your assigned week? My thoughts about my ability and comfort level with leading this group during this assignment week is very enthusiastic. My current group offer a lot of insight and different opinions by each individual. My current group is good at listening to each person's ideas and strategizing ways to incorporate every concept that may add to the building of the group.

What strengths will you bring as a leader? As the current group leader, I bring organizational skills, time management, and the ability to take each concept and merge everyone's ideas into one full picture. I'm able to research and access information to share with the group so that everyone is informed to better educate themselves on what is needed to complete the project.

What challenges do you think you will experience in your role as leader? The challenge that I think I will experience in my role as a leader is my ability to lead. I want to ensure that when it's my time to lead I am giving the information that is needed for my portion for the group project. I don't want to disappoint any of the other participants in my group.
