Personally, from what I perceive from the image, it is a man sitting in a chair, looking out the window. You can also see an image in which it seems to be his family since there is a minor and two adults. The image transmits to me that the man is depressed, tired, and lonely. I feel that he misses his family and that is why he is looking at the image. I also think that the fact that he is looking out the window is a sign that he is looking for freedom. The sleeves of his shirt I think also play an important role in how tired he is, as they are rolled up.

My other perspective is that the man is in his office at work, wanting it to end so he can get back to his family.

But overall I feel that regardless of where the man is, the message that he misses and wants to be reunited with his family is clear. He is a man who when he is not with his family he is depressed and that is what his clothing and gestures show.
