#2 In medieval scholasticism, faith was typically seen as superior to other methods of attaining knowledge since its source is divine relation, does this view point still exist today? What presuppositions is the view based on? Are these presuppositions warrened?

The primary purpose of scholasticism was to find answers to resolve contradiction which was most well known in mid evil times. Yes, these methods are still used today. These presuppositions are still taught today they mean devoting one's life to learning.

In my personal life I have been through some hard times like being in an abusive relationship and being in prison away from family. Even though I had visits it was still hard to be away. When I was in prison I did pray for my family's health and love for not just me but my self. I also prayed for my own safety and also health along with reuniting with family and being accepted by all again. I did pray a lot to get through hard times in prison and to help me get back into the real world. I do feel stronger as a person since I came home and more sense of love and compassion . Prison made me stronger as a person over all.
