

Camille Pinheiro

Professor Lyndell O'Hara

World Civilization

9 February 2023

“The Nature of the Cosmos, Social Order and Individual Ethics in Today's World”

As a Christian, I believe God created cosmos, the universe, out of nothing. The Bible says that God created everything in six days and rested on the seventh day. He said, “let there be light,” and there was light in the darkness on the first day. He created the sky on the second day. He separated the land from the sea on the third day. He then created the sun, moon, and stars on the fourth day. On the fifth day, he created the creatures that live in the sea and creatures that fly. On the sixth day, he created the animals that live on the land and, finally, humans, made in the image of God. And lastly, He rested on the seventh day. However, there are many theories out there about the nature of the cosmos. There are scientific theories, religious theories, and so much more, and not everyone believes in God's creation of the cosmos.

Social order refers to the way people interact with each other in society without violence or coercion. I believe that social order is something that everyone in one community, including citizens and authorities, lives respecting each other. For example, we have laws, rules, and restrictions that help society to be more organized and avoid confusion in many aspects. We have government and authorities to organize those things for us. However, we should live according to not only human laws but also Godly laws. God gave Moses the Ten Commandments, and Jesus gave us one of the most important laws: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart, soul, and mind," and "love your neighbor as yourself." If we follow these laws, we will automatically respect and love everyone in our society, which leads to obeying authorities and the government. However, the social order nowadays doesn't work like that. People tend to do what they want and not what they are obligated to do, which is one of the reasons why we have many crimes and disorganizations in society.

Individual ethics is clearly seen in the Bible. The Bible mentions many times what we should do and not. For example, even the Ten Commandments say not to commit murder and adultery, not to give false testimony to our neighbors, and honor our parents on earth. However, as I mentioned above, people tend to do their heart's desire and not God's will or act on their emotions and feelings at the moment, and not everyone believes in God, which is why we have many disorders in the world.

These are the nature of the cosmos, social order, and individual ethics that I believe and in today's world.