Who Am I?

My name is Daniel Ribeiro, and I am a senior year student at Alliance University. I was born and raised here in the United States, specifically in New Jersey. However, my parents came here to America from Brazil as missionaries in 1997. I am currently studying Pastoral Ministry in hopes to become a pastor and leader who helps other ministries in how to grow their ministries in strategic leadership, and to become a missionary, leading others in worship. It's a pretty specific calling that I have, but that is the dream that I have for my future. However, it has revealed to me that I am continually in need of Christ Jesus each and every day. He has continued to show Himself faithful to me, and has shown me to be my best friend. I cannot live without him. I have found my healing in my friendship with Jesus. He has given me much freedom in my walk with Him. The one person I admire in my life is my mom. She has walked through much hardship and showed me what faithfulness to the Lord is. She has taught me to continually give myself over to the Lord each and every day no matter what I go through.
