

My Personal Covenant

Written By Eugenie C. Cidoine

God I have the feeling that you have called me to be a teacher. You have shown time and time again why I would be a good teacher. I often find myself taking leadership positions or helping people to understand an idea or subject in a better way. Such as the time that I was a director for the adventurer club or the time that I helped my professor with his class since he had a meeting. If it is your will to make me switch majors I will, I believe that you can help me gain my confidence back and help me to not feel stupid when it comes to teaching people. After what happened in the summer with the girls at camp, I lost every power in me to lead. But I know that the enemy is attacking me and you can reveal yourself to me and make me be more willing to understand your calling over my life.

My pride is high God and I often feel like I know a lot when in reality I do not know much. I am hesitant to receive corrections from people at times. Please help me to be more willing and open to receiving corrections and criticisms. Create in me a clean heart and purify me. I want to be ready for whatever that you have installed for me in my life. With this covenant that I am making I hope that it truly helps me to continue. I know that you're able to remind me of the words that I write. I do not want to become comfortable in what I am doing right now that I am not letting myself grow or really listening to the knowledge, correction or criticism that is being presented to me.

Lord, I am making this covenant with you because I truly want to do right by you. My heart yearns to be closer to you and to make it to heaven. I want the goodness that you are offering and the peace and love and joy that you promised us in heaven. I took the Five Fold survey test and it said evangelism is my strongest suit. I thought it was teaching all of this time, but Lord I am asking you to please reveal to me what you want me to know, reveal to me what I should be focused on, what I should be working toward to bring more souls to you. As christian it is my job to hopefully impact someone in a positive way and I want to do that. Please do not let anything stand in my way to take me away from your will. I feel like I am being wiped out at the moment, but I have seen time and time again how you have helped me. Lord please help me stay true to my covenant and to carry out your work.
