Audio Interfaces, Studio Monitors, and Headphones

This video helps me understand how a studio works and what constitutes it; it is fascinating to know that background sounds can blend with your voice in a microphone when you are closer to it. I have always loved listening to music on speaker or through headphones because the beats are ten times better; you discover a new sound because it is closer to your ears. We know that there are many devices to connect audio interfaces to a computer and all the inputs and outputs used to record in a studio. This section was particularly helpful for me because knowing the name of all the outputs and inputs a producer needs to work on makes me understand why they use all that stuff to make music. Now I also understand why a producer needs money to be successful because they need so many devices to produce good music, and they cost money.
