

Alexander the Great died holding a record of being undefeated in all the battles he pursued. Some of the battles he fought and won are the battles he fought to completely take over Persia. He defeated India and Egypt. In Egypt he was crown pharaoh and given the countries treasure.

Aristotle tutored Alexander the Great, which sparked his interest in Art, Drama, Philosophy, government, science, architect & language.

The idea of him meeting his demise probably hadn't crossed his mind because he did not leave any instructions for who will rule in his place once he has expired. His wife and son were murdered after he died so that ended his bloodline of nobility. His Generals began forming their own empires.
