Assignment: Frame it Assignment

Date: February 16th, 2023

This week's assignment at the end of chapter 18 frame it yourself are "What if" scenario questions. The first question is "What if the 100 year war would have been the day France and King Louis XIV would have conquered England?" This would cause a trickle effect on the future of the other nations. Because this war itself was 100 years. But many years later there was the Revolution War between the United States and England France would probably not only concordered but also the countries that had connections with England. History that we have studied in the past and in the books today may not be what it is today. As for John Locke being the footnote of history? I believe it would still be the footnote of history and based on his philosophy and belief on how humans are supposed to be treated regardless of where you live or what skin color.
