

Jordan Mack

Professor O'Hara

HIS 114

16 February 2023

The three take-aways I have from this video were the reason for naming it the Enlightenment, new commodities brought in, and the new writers.

The Enlightenment was a period in time that created a shift in how people thought. The term enlightens a person, bringing new thoughts and ideas. A challenge against tradition and seeing if old ideas were valuable anymore.

The new commodities like coffee, tea, and tobacco created new ways of income. Trade was increasing due to these experiments. They brought new ideas too and got rid of famine. Starvation was no longer thought of as so common.

Writers like Montesquieu and Voltaire brought new ideas to europeans. These ideas are still talked about today in education. Their ideas challenged the old ways of thinking. Their works were extremely valuable to the people of europe.

These three take-aways changed the course of history immensely. The Enlightenment was a revolutionary time in history.