Alexander the Great went up against the Persian empire which was also a very strong empire at the time. At only 20 years of age Alexander the Great was a great and fierce leader who brought success at every battle. Alexander had many experienced soldiers, they were elite and well trained soldiers, his army seemed unstoppable from the highly trained men and just the numbers of them, they had tactics as well. Alexander won so many battles that back home in Greece there was rebellion, he even had to defeat Spartans because they weren't part of the allies.

Alexander wanted all of Persia not just half of it but all of it because he thought that now his mission is to rule the whole world. No matter the odds Alexander's great army kept winning against the Persian empire battle after battle many times the Greeks would be outnumbered but they would still come out on top by just being fearless and surprising the Persian army. He just kept going naming cities after cities after his name, he reached the limit of how far he could go in Persia.
