SUMMARY

Chapter three focuses on the early middle ages from the fall of Romulus Augustus to the Schism between East and West. There was chaos in the west by Germanic invasions and cultivation of literature and knowledge in the east that led to some controversies that highlighted mainly around the issues of Christology. The end of this chapter speaks about the rupture of the east and west and dials in on Cardinal Humbert who broke communion with the Pope calling him a heretic. He also broke communion with the entire church that he represented.
