Statement: "There is no need for Christians to obey the law (Ten Commandments) anymore because we cannot gain our righteousness through it, but only through faith in Christ."

I have read The Bible and always knew that it played an important role in my life and in many other people on earth and that going to church was a way to give respect to our creator above where you taught about God's character and His creating the Universe and the prophets along the way, but the most important aspect of the Bible is knowing its history and the Laws and Revelation that are given by what we know as the Ten Commandments found in the book of Exodus 20:2-17 that gives direct commands that are to be followed by every human that believes in God, who took to flesh and blood form of human being of Jesus to reveal himself to the world to bring about salvation and with Christian thinking God fulfilled the plan through Christ.

I feel Christians do believe in the Ten Commandments they are God's spoken words made to follow the Laws that are about honoring in prayer, be respectful of others, not steal, and to help the poor and some of these rules God expects us to live by them. In the New Testament the rules are now different from the Old Testament It's based on the conviction that God fulfilled His promises with the coming of Jesus and that salvations comes by grace through believing and having faith in Him.

In reading the Old Testament I think the people believed in the Commandments it was just knowing the difference through prophets that were sent to spread the gospel by God to live the right way, God was there for them at all times and keeping his promises. This is something I feel Christian have faith in they understand that no idols or other gods were to be bowed to and to keep obeying the laws everything would be alright.

Today you may have some non-believers of laws, rules and lack of respect and not following doing what they want and not showing concern about their fellow neighbor it leads to harmful things happening and recovering from it is a learning lesson each time. I'm sure God frowns upon all this, but when you go to God in prayer with a sincere heart and repent you are forgiven and with that it becomes your gospel teaching for someone who can use inspiration to do and be better in keeping the Law.

Jesus says, "Love One Another" John 15: 12-13, because He loved us before we loved him. 1 John 4:10 and no matter what people are going through the act of knowing that God hears your prayers knows your actions I don't see how any of this can be different from The Old Testament or The New Testament the laws are the same for everyone who understands Gods purpose is redemption for the whole world.
