Ten Commandments

Where Do The 10 Commandments Appear in Scripture?

There are two accounts of the Ten Commandments appearing in the Bible. One set of the Commandments is found in Exodus Chapter 20, Verses 2 to 17. Another set is found in Deuteronomy Chapter 5, Verses 6 to 21. Besides, there is a partial set of the Commandments in Leviticus Chapter 19, Verses 3 to 4, 11 to 13, 15 to 16, 30, and 32.

Do You Think Christians Should Not Obey the Ten Commandments?

Christians are believers in Christ Jesus. Jesus Christ is introduced in the Bible in the Old Testament at the point of creation. However, his mission of salvation is in the New Testament. The people in the Old Testament must obey the Ten Commandments as instructed by God to the Israelites.

What Does the New Testament Say About Obeying Them?

The New Testament insinuate that Christians should not keep the Ten Commandments, Israelites' civil laws, since the church has grown from Israelites to a people of all nations. However, in the book of John Chapter 14, verse 15, God says that His people should keep His Commandments if they love him. He argues that keeping His Commandments is an expression of love towards him and that he will also love those who love him. Therefore, Christians should obey the Ten Commandments.

What Is the Old Testament Concept of Salvation?

The Old Testament defines salvation as the outworking of Israelites, not God's choice of and its commitment to them. It depicts how God's people should relate and what is expected of them daily, resulting from their previous divine choices.

Did People on The Old Testament Believe That by Obeying the Ten Commandments Would Lead to Their Salvation?

People in the Old Testament believed that they must obey the Ten Commandments. However, obeying this commandment would not earn one salvation. Old Testaments were there to teach people about the virtue God expected of them. Besides, it expresses God's will among his people and merits their close attention to God throughout their lives. Salvation in the Old Testament would only be achieved by trusting in God's promise and having faith in him, as did Abraham and other people named in the Holy Scriptures.
