Week 4 Short Answer Questions:

1. I feel that having an education in music can help you detect good takes from bad ones because that education, can help enhance that skill and teach you more than what you already know. It's the same with horseback riding having an education in it helps you understand what you're doing a little better, and gives a boost to your skill. Not everyone just has a natural talent for stuff and even though you might you can still make mistakes or mess up because there might be helpful knowledge that others might have.
2. In the music industry, most producers want to become objective, independent speakers. They should be able to close the gap between commercial viability and artistic expression. They are the middle man and as the middle man you are the most important piece that brings the track together. Using the artist's talent as well as their own together they should be able to create something that not only will sell but will also help them grow in partnership.
