On January 18th- February 23, me and my partner Santiago were assigned to edit and create a checklist in which we are trying to collect information as to see how our in-process plan will turn out in the next couple of months. Our plan as a group of students is to see how we will create an application/website for student athletes in which our intended plan is to make it easier for them to have access and to know any up- to – dates information. Not much we have done as testers since currently we are continuing to wait what the other groups are doing for us to test things out and fill in our checklist. In the meantime, Santiago and I have been doing in the meantime is that we've gone back and make sure our checklist has no spelling error or other miscellaneous error like making sure it makes sense. Our other colleagues, Shanice and Maria Vargas took their time to check on our checklist and making sure our checklist is reasonable for everybody else to understand. For our checklist we use confluence in which in my own opinion, I think it is easier for us to make the checklist look more organized for us to use when the time for us to test the project in which we hope that it will eventually happen in the next couple of weeks.

Overall, we are just hoping that that we will be able to use the checklist to eventually test out the programs that my other colleagues are working on and eventually we will get to see the results soon.
