

1. We have learned that wind power, water power and, most of all, muscle power were the means by which jobs were done. How do you see these elements conveyed in this film?

A. Man power

Victorian Navvies used to build train tracks which is an example of manpower and people who made violin strings is also an example of manpower.

B. Water Power

Sewer couts needed to keep the sewers flowing which is an example of water power.

C. Wind Power

A good example of wind power are the guillemot egg collectors because they were on ropes in the sky in whatever type of weather collecting eggs.

2. The film is about worst jobs - which of these do you consider the worst of the worst and why?

The job that I would consider to be the worst job in history would be the guillemot egg collector. The idea of me on a rope in any type of weather trying to collect eggs and while getting attacked by birds sounds extremely dangerous and life threatening to me. Eggs in this time period were essential so it was required for some people to work this job as dangerous as it is. Egg collectors would be on a rope with a bucket collecting eggs which is both life threatening and extremely difficult.
