1) We have learned that wind power, water power and, most of all, muscle power were the means by which jobs were done. How do you see these elements conveyed in this film?

Agrarian cultures depend on the use of water, wind, and power, and numerous methods and technologies have been developed to use these resources for agriculture. These age-old farming methods have been practiced for generations and are still employed today, along with some modern technologies, in some places.

2) The film is about "worst jobs" - which of these do you consider the "worst of the worst" and why?

The job I would consider the worst of worst would be the manual labor jobs that have people working very long shifts with low pay rates and little to no benefits that also had them working in bad conditions.
