This reflection paper will describe the Conceptual Framework of Alliance University Nursing School. This is a virtue that nursing students should have to become developing and successful nurses as Christians.

Alliance University Nursing School Conceptual Framework has Godly Living, Person, Health, Environment, Nursing, Service, and Cultural Competence. (Hwang 2021). Godly living emphasizes a godly life as a Christian. (Hwang 2021). Alliance University nursing students pursue becoming nurses through prayer, faith, scripture study, and obedience to God through the Bible. (Hwang 2021). People have diversity and individuality. The Department of Nursing aims to learn the character of God by creating a personality and forming relationships while studying nursing. (Hwang 2021). Health refers to the health of the mind and body. (Hwang 2021). Perfect health is connected to God and Perfect health means that the spirit and soul are goals and socially healthy. (Hwang 2021). The environment, which means humans are influenced by their environment and make choices based on it. (Hwang 2021). There is a mutual relationship between man and the environment, and the environment can sufficiently change the individual, and the individual can also change the environment. (Hwang 2021).

The goal of nursing is to intervene in the health of others. (Hwang 2021). A nurse's job is to help those in need. Nursing directly, systematically, and concretely heals the patient. Nurses are essential members that cannot be replaced in this age of technological advancement. Nurses should consider service to others as a fundamental element. (Hwang 2021). Nursing shows God's glory by serving others or the sick. (Hwang 2021). Christian nurses especially need the willingness to serve others. Cultural competency is understanding the way people exist in the world based on their personal beliefs. (Hwang 2021). Nursing intervention is effective when there is a cultural clash. This can be learned through hospital clinical. A nurse who can intervene while respecting people from different cultures is competent. (Hwang 2021). Nurses are medical professionals who help patients in unexpected situations.

Reflection

I agree with all seven frames. These frames are essential for Christian nurses. And even non-Christian nurses can become developmental and professional nurses if they consider these frames. The Alliance Department of Nursing believes that it is about treating patients' lives as well. Nursing based on environment, health, diversity, and service spirit is ideal and desirable. I think the environment is the most important. Technology is advancing and more will be developed in the future. Nurses had the role of healing the patient's mind and body at the same time without being affected by technological development. Most surgeons are replaced by robots, but it is said that it is difficult to replace nurses who maintain stability while exchanging emotions with humans. (Christoforou 2019). There will be robots that deliver medicine or give information in the future, but nurses who give warm minds and glances are irreplaceable. If the nurse's job was solely to see patients in the past, now it has more responsibilities such as education, networking, chores, and having conversations with patients. Travel nurses, telenurses, and various assistant nurses, are diversified, and hospitals have become a community of education, welfare, and cultural space that prevents diseases, not a space for patients. In the future, people who have fast cognitive ability, language development, and behavioral adaptation will adapt easier using advanced technology rather than using psychological stability or human love. (Christoforou 2019). The future society will change the role of nurses. Regarding the rapidly changing healthcare technology and treatment, there will be advanced medical technology and technology that brings rapid recovery for more precise and meticulous nursing care. Even if medical technology develops, nurses will become necessary medical personnel for life.

Development

Nursing is an act of caring that helps people achieve physical, emotional, and spiritual health, and is based on a calling to respond to God's love. The difference I see between Christian nurses and non-Christian nurses is that they want the patient's complete happiness. Christian nurses hope that their patients will be healed through spiritual guidance. A person in the frame is in a relationship. The relationship between a nurse and a patient is a relationship with the special purpose of solving health problems. Nurses can be spiritual and moral supporters. The spiritual relationship between God and the nurse can also be applied to the patient.

One is a person who relieves pain and discomfort, and the other is a person who strives to improve health. The nurse and patient are developing a relationship, and it is a special relationship that takes place in a hospital. This process can take place at any time when the patient and nurse meet together. The patient recovers through the positive attention he receives from the nurse. The nurse can maintain objectivity and the perspective of providing therapeutic help. And the patient is protected from threats to health as knowledge increases through the helping relationship. Treatment reflects the nurse's medical philosophy on health and human nature based on God. Therefore, nurses must be able to clearly express their beliefs and values. Christian nurses believe that all health problems are related to God. For Christians who believe in Jesus, physical health is important, but keeping spiritual health is more important than anything else. Because the Bible says, "Guard your heart above all else, for it is the source of life." (Proverbs 4:23). In other words, it is a story that is very important to maintain a right and healthy relationship with God and to keep a spiritual heart. So, the training of faith life is for us to read and meditate on the Word of God daily, do our best to know God, sanctify ourselves with the habit of prayer, and ultimately live a blessed and good life according to the Word. And when spiritual health is restored, physical health also increases. Changes in the environment affect nurses and patients. Currently, all countries are talking about the importance of nurses' work, such as elderly care. This is because medical care plays an increasingly important role in improving the quality of life, and the role of nurses becomes more and more important in an aging society. It is also necessary to conduct education and research on the human body, research on the human brain, research on cognitive engineering, the establishment of relationships between robots and humans, and research human emotions. This is because nurses need to play a role in the effectiveness and efficiency of treatment in the health care system. The purpose of nursing is to promote human health by understanding human nature, studying the characteristics of nursing, and explaining, predicting, and controlling nursing behavior. Nursing is based on interventions for the patient, appointments with the patient, and goal attainment. The purpose of nursing is to maintain, promote, restore, and maintain optimal well-being for individuals, families, groups, and communities. A nurse's service is focused on helping patients. As a Christian nurse, taking pride in being helpful makes progress. Furthermore, cooperative medical service is important in global medical welfare service. Some regions and countries need nurses. Nursing schools also need to learn how to send nursing professionals to more appropriate places and manage them efficiently. The cultural competencies of nurses include communication, understanding, knowledge, relationships, and language. Nurses must acknowledge cultural and personal diversity. Nurses should make efforts to understand cultural diversity positively.

Addition and Removal of Concepts

The frame I want to erase is the person frame because the nurse's involvement with the patient and the relationship is diverse. Relationships can be made in a variety of ways because there are many situations. And there is a part that overlaps with cultural competency.

An area I would like to add is the prospects for the future of nurses. Society and the environment evolve. The environment affects nurses, and nurses are also influenced by the environment. As the environment changes rapidly, the prospects of nurses, work ethics, and areas to be newly studied change. Therefore, I would like to emphasize what nurses should always study in the current environment and the behavior and research that will affect the future. A study on the future of nursing will provide an opportunity to see the profession of a nurse from a new perspective and will enable future nurses to have bigger goals and dreams.

In the Department of Nursing at Alliance university, I learned to become an upright, spiritual, and enterprising medical professional through the 7 frames of nursing. The goal of the nursing department is independence. With the right knowledge, understanding, relationship, spirit, and, finally, a relationship with God, nurses can intervene independently and work with responsibility.
