Classical Liberalism - Founded on the ideas of the Enlightenment, which call for increased citizens' freedoms and the government's servitude to 'the people.'

Nationalism - A country's cumulative identity made up of an aggregate of their cultural, historical, and linguistic identities, which set them apart from others.

(Utopian) Socialism - The political idea that all people will work together for the common good of everyone within the society.

Romanticism - A cultural movement developed from the emotions and feelings which erupted out of the 'over-rationalized' Enlightenment period, springing growth in the arts instead of sciences.
