Conservatives believe that government should play a smaller role in people's lives and value tradition and social stability. At the same time as it acknowledges the necessity of evolving with the times, it works to preserve the status quo of society and prevent any major disruptions to it.

Those who subscribe to the political philosophy known as "Classical Liberalism" believe that people should be able to pursue their happiness with as little interference from the government as possible (Sargent, 2016). It is predicated on safeguarding civil and economic liberties and valuing and encouraging personal independence.

Nationalism is a form of political ideology that calls for a steadfast allegiance to one's country above all others. The concept rests on the notion that citizens of a given nation-state have a common bond due to their shared history, culture, and language.

Utopian socialism is a socialist ideology that aims to establish a just and equitable utopia (Sargent, 2016). The fundamental tenet is that people working together can improve society.

Throughout the latter half of the 18th century, a new aesthetic and literary trend called Romanticism developed. Emotion, the natural world, the creative process, and the uniqueness of the individual are all significant themes. Romanticism is concerned with the expression of feeling and the investigation of the self.
