Capstone 2: February Journal

Week 1 (Feb 1-4): As I started my journey through this class, I was surprised that we had to do a journal, but I am excited to start this anyway. Before this journal started, I thankfully fixed or am fixing more of my school issues. I felt calm this week due to my understanding of my situation for this semester and the next. As for schoolwork, I have been given a task by my professor to design the newest home page for AUCONNECT. I was very excited to do this; I even had enough time to make it great. I also started my work as a tester for the application. I had to fill out the Athletics Event Planner for my first task. It was a bit difficult to accomplish since I was confused about how to do it. After a while, I completed it and then ask Maria for her input and she did do a few changes. Thankfully, the Professor understand how I filled out the sheet and pushed me in the right direction to make it better. I also was working on the designs for the home page of AUCONNECT (concept-wise). This was a pretty good week for me in general as well.

Week 2 (Feb 5-11): During this week, I was truly getting into the groove of being back at school, but I still had a few issues with homework this week. Thankfully, they gave me mercy; I fixed my school issues. I also had a few problems with the design work for AUCONNECT. I needed more time on this task since it was three different designs. I also wanted to do something more modern for the third one. The other two design's development was going well, but it was the third design was the one I needed a bit more time with. I had a great Sunday as well. Our church is planning something for Easter and an upcoming event. I am working with our creative team on many projects and I am excited about them. I also did my tester homework, but this time, Maria and I worked together. We talked through Slack; each thought of what we needed in this planner for us to use. I was so surprised that there still hasn't been snow, which made me a bit sad. I was fine about it in the end. Thankfully this week was great for me.

Week 3 (Feb 12-18): This was a nice week for me as well. This week had Valentine's Day, which I celebrated with family. It was fun; I had a great time as well. This week, I finished my design work for AUCONNECT; I thought that it looks quite nice. It was strange that the professor didn't ask for it this week, but I knew he would eventually. I also didn't have any work as a tester for this week. After weeks of school, I finally got my mindset into school in the middle of February. Nothing eventful this week, but I still had a great week.

Week 4 (Feb 19-25): This week was when I finally showed my design work to the professor. I was excited and nervous to show the professor, but he liked it. I might fix some things about it, but I want to talk to Maria beforehand. I also had a fun time in my class with Professor Skylar. Nothing eventful this week as well, but it was fine. I am doing more stuff for my church and it is great.

Week 5 (Feb 26-28): This week was a short one, but it was also fun. I talked with Maria about the design; she loves it. For the rest of this week, I need to be prepared to fix something at my church and for early registration. This is where this journal ends.

I have a good time this month and I am very excited about March for personal reasons.

Thank you for your time.
