What if Muhammad had Died Ten Years Earlier?

If Muhammad would have died ten years earlier there would not have been a true prophet. The prophet would most likely been known as Islamic teachings. The Muslim religion would most likely believe in Moses and Jesus since they were also considered prophets. I believe that another person would have came and become a prophet like figure. In the religion everyone is an equal so truthfully someone could have became a prophet soon after Muhammad passed.

Initially I'm sure the people would be frightened in what to do since Muhammad was the founder of Islam. The people would most likely find someone to fill this role most likely someone that was close and around Muhammad. I believe that what Muhammad did was inevitable and would have happened even if it wasn't Muhammad.
