

In this research and writing assignment, I will be researching the manner in which network connections impact my daily life. I have identified six items that are part of my daily life and the network connections needed to bring them into my home.

The first item is my laptop computer. My laptop was made in China and shipped directly to the store from which I bought it. The network connection needed to bring it into my home was the shipping route from the factory in China to the store in the United States.

The second item is my cell phone. My cell phone was also made in China and shipped directly to the store from which I bought it. The network connection needed to bring it into my home was the same as the laptop, the shipping route from the factory in China to the store in the United States.

The third item is my clothing. My clothing is made in various countries, including Indonesia, Bangladesh, and India. The network connection needed to bring it into my home was the shipping route from the factories in those countries to the store in the United States.

The fourth item is my food. My food is sourced from various countries, including Mexico, Peru, and Chile. The network connection needed to bring it into my home was the shipping route from the farms in those countries to the store in the United States.

The fifth item is my furniture. My furniture is made in various countries, including China, Vietnam, and India. The network connection needed to bring it into my home was the shipping route from the factories in those countries to the store in the United States.

The sixth item is my books. My books are printed in various countries, including the United States, the United Kingdom, and Canada. The network connection needed to bring them into my home was the shipping route from the printing presses in those countries to the store in the United States.

What would my world be like without this global network? Without this global network, I would not have access to the same variety of products that I have today. I would not be able to purchase items from around the world, and I would be limited to the products that are available in my local area. Additionally, without this global network, I would not be able to access the same information that I have access to today. I would not be able to read books from around the world, and I would not be able to access the same news and information that I have access to today. Without this global network, my world would be much smaller and much less connected.
