

Last week I was busy at my internship. I worked for four days. Many people visit the senior center for their SNAP, Medicaid, MSP, SSI, SSA, and senior housing. Everything is about money and money. Also, people visit the senior center for breakfast and lunch. There are people who are taking classes in English, computers, smart phones, etc. I think it is enough, but there are some people complaining about giving lunch a water bottle instead of milk or whether there is too little for side dishes. Recently, KCS senior center has started to give information about elderly abuse and planning seminars. According to their information, elderly people are hiding because it happened to their children and feel embarrassed about letting other people know. Also, it said most elderly abuse happens to their children rather than husbands or wives. It is a sad reality. But, somehow, I understand why, because children may have seen the same thing in the past: their parents treated their parents in the same way or their parents did not act like parents. I believe there will be many reasons and causes. So, I hope scholars find the reason and causes why children are neglecting their parents when they are fully grown and trying to find solutions to get rid of elderly abuse.
