

The gupta empire

One interesting thing I learned was how they drink out of sundried river mud, this is so they can put it right back into the earth once you finish your drink. Nother thing was the detail of the Gold coin that held the golden bow of Rama. One thing I found really interesting was how far along they were with technology. They also had been known for metal, they were masters with iron and the works with it. Lastly I learned overall that the Gupta empire was very focused on high quality at the time. With all the different metals and things they used, especially the variety.
