Communism ideology promoted a political ideology which the state owns major of the assets in a society such as property, education, agriculture and transportation. There is no state control. Therefore, the ideology it believed in are sociopolitical, philosophical and economic. Fascisms ideology promoted nationalism, run by one person. Fascism do not believe in rules set by customs or pact. The following are examples of Communism and Fascism, China and Russia stood by the same communism political philosophy, societal organizations. They are committed to global command and power internal and external governance. That being said, they are both in agreement of not interfering in either of their affairs. Fascism in Italy in the 20th century, with Benito Mussolini as prime minister forced Italians by his rules. Political and analytical views were averse. They encouraged economic improvement and sustainability. They also formed a government and political structure forbidding resistance from other parties.
