3 things I learned about world war I

1. One of the causes of world war I was the assassination of the Austrian archduke Franz Ferdinand by Bosnian serb nationalist Gavrilo Princip. It lead Austrian to issue an ultimatum to Serbia, where Serbia accepted some but not all leading Austria to declare war on Serbia.
2. The war was very destructive and I had no idea how many people died, Over 15 million people were killed and over 20 million wounded, in france 13.3% of the male population between 15 and 45 died in the war, a lot of civilians died.
3. World war I's most efficient killer was disease, the famous influenza epidemic that broke out towards the end of the war which killed three times as many people as the war itself.
