

The first very interesting fact I learned about the Gupta empire is that the king governed without any capital punishment. Of course, there are other ways to punish someone who behaves outside of the limits but it's still fascinating that this actually worked.

Another very interesting thing that I didn't know before is that no one in this community killed any living creatures. This basically means there has been a society being vegetarian very long ago.

Interesting to learn was also the way that metal workers dealt with the metal. As the guy in the documentation explains they hit metal parts on top of each other and combined them like this. I never heard of that style and also kind of didn't believe at first that this actually works.

Last but not least, I learned about a Gupta astronomer from around 500 A.D. who was the one who proved that the earth is going around the sun and thus that we are not the center of our galaxy.
