Week 9 - 10 Point Response

Throughout this week's discussion video we were taught how to get your music on television shows, commercials, Netflix and even movies. Adam Ivy does a great job explaining and breaking down the great details that it takes to accomplish such a thing. Many people have questions about how they can get their music on TV and in commercials. One of the first actions that should be taken is that you sign up on "www.imdb.com" if you haven't yet. The website is a very powerful tool that can help link you to many useful people and TV shows. It's important to then set up a portfolio with all your credentials and any information about yourself that may help your stock. It's important to know that the music that is mostly wanted is emotion driven loop based songs. Throughout this video you will find a lot of successful tips that can help you reach the goal of getting your music aired on television, a show or even a movie. I believe if you were to follow the many tips provided in the video by Adam Ivy you should be able to find success if you try and push yourself hard enough.
