“Which topic am I choosing and what do I think my viewpoint will be? Explain with freewriting, using this time to explore what you have to say

The topic I am choosing is Teaching College Writing. I chose this topic because one of the articles posted caught my attention. Anyways, that's besides the point. I think my viewpoint regarding this topic will be that there are two ways to succeed in college writing. The first way being factual and the second way being expressional. I know what I mean in my head but I'm having a hard time putting it into words. I'm not sure how I'll put it into words but I can try describing it, which the two articles I've chosen backs me up perfectly.

The first way, which is factual, in my mind is a paper that includes evidence. That looks like articles, news clippings, studies, peer-reviewed journals, clinic trials, and many more as long as it is facts and not opinion based. What I meant by expressional earlier was that based on the kind of paper being written, writing should be taught to be based on the writer letting their voice be heard, including personal experiences, even with opinions as long as it's backed up with some piece of evidence. It should also be persuasive, changing the reader's viewpoint and/or mood. That's how I see it depending on the type of paper being written.
