Week 10 - 10 Point Response

This week's topic was based on the history of musical theater and included a little history from opera to pop through the YouTube video. The earliest forms of musical theater trace back to Ancient Greece and that happens to be a very long time. The first musical to be performed in America was located in New York City on September 12, 1866. Since then it went on to be a very big and important piece of not only musical history but history in the state's as well. The 1940s will be known as the Musical Golden Age and would really change the course of history forever. The ending of the golden age is still talked about and is not entirely settled by the experts. It was a short video but contained a lot of useful information that can definitely be a great place for someone to get started if they are trying to get to know just a touch of the history of musical theater.
