Supernaturalism is those who believe that there is a higher power ( God ), whereas naturalists are more subjective and objective. Also, naturalism is more about people being naturally formed and there is nothing supernatural about us as an individual.

3.

Yes! One can believe in science and still believe in God because God created everything ( ALL things ). I am also assuming that he would be the one who created science as well, but some people will start worshiping science instead of seeing it as something amazing that was created by God. Colossians 1:16

I am used to mother nature because the mother is someone who will give birth. I would say that sister nature is a little odd because there is a deeper connection in both nature and nurture, whereas with the sister it seems like they are not the original brand. From a Christian perspective sister nature is like saying we are brothers and sisters in Christ and we have no power over each other, meaning nature has no power over humans and its beauty should be awed and appreciated forever.

Since Philosophical anthropology is a branch of philosophy that aims to bring together various empirical studies of human nature to better understand people as both creatures of their surroundings and creators of their values. Then, Both psychology and theology are interested in philosophical anthropology to better understand human action and nature. It may aid in the integration process. If psychology only looks at naturalistic theories, it can restrict biblical hermeneutics, rendering integration impossible.

While some pre-drug majors will in general deviate, brain research is viewed as a science and as such, it depends on the logical strategy, rationale, and thinking, and is worried about the biopsychosocial cosmetics of an individual. Generally, people are the focal worry in brain research. On the other hand, philosophy is worried about contemplating the nature of God and God's relationship to the world. Likewise, with any religion, Scripture assumes a critical part in the improvement of tenets and as per the content, since Scripture furthermore, God is worried about people, philosophical human studies are likewise contained inside the investigation of philosophy. As we can see at this point, both religious philosophy and brain science are worried about philosophical human studies. Together, these holy messengers of approach help us to build up a more complete, comprehensive, perspective on human instinct. Christian philosopher sees the Holy Bible as God's message to the world.

Psychology addressed a few things that were stepping on religion. For example, Psychology found out that certain mental illnesses have nothing to do with bad spirits or being possessed because some behaviors are caused by origin or by the social environment of the person. Psychology is also the study of the soul which has to do with religion. Therefore, religion is needed in the psychology field because people are looking for their souls to heal, and to heal one must feel. These two just intertwined with each other.
