WHAT IF:

I chose to do the “what if” example of Cuba missiles Crisis movie that we watched for this week class, by watching a movie, that happily had a good ending, we have to talk about what if the two leaders did not accept the negotiations and set all the nuclear bombs off, first we talk about logistics, John Kennedy was the president of America and had partnerships between Italy and Turkey, where United States had this bombs located in case nesses to be set off, in the other hand, Soviet Union implemented their missiles in Cuba because of the partnership sure Fidel Casto in order for protection from America. Cuba is not far from Florida, one of the states that belongs to the United States. Who has the power to make those hard decisions are the leaders of the countrying, and having assistance from other people like ministries to help them to clarify their ideas and options but the last word always comes from the president.

If the leaders of Us and Soviet Union launched their missiles because they could not get into an agreement during Cold War, not only would affect the entire world economy due the america is one of the biggest provider of resources and military to many of the countries, in a long term it would cause a huge scale of economy regression, because would have to be focusing damage caused by the nuclear bomb, but if we talk about the environment, the missiles would led to a catastrophic environment event, many and many cities would be destroyed, the explosion would cause fires and the radiation would be lasting probably forever and damage the environment, the nuclear particles would be in the air, happening to the air be cloudy and the sunlight would not go through the air causing the temperature to drop.

With this analysis of what if the nuclear missiles happened, we have to be extremely happy with the end of the story, because it is not worth to damage other people's life because of an ego, and the leaders would have to take the responsibility of the damage for the rest of their life.
