Presentation

For professor Lebo's presentation I had learned that asthma is the most common chronic disease in children worldwide, how having social support and empowerment help manage their child with the disease. She explained in 2016 how a lot of people were diagnosed with asthma in the U.S and I had learned that it's a chronic lung disease that they have to manage throughout their lives. I had learned that caregivers who take care of children with asthma in general have more stress. I had learned that it's important for parents to learn how to control asthma and how social support can actually help. It's important to decrease ER visits and increase social support. She explained that when she looks at social support and empowerment, the overall experience with social support is the most important, it's not what type of social support we have, but what's more important is they need to have social support in order to empower caregivers.
