Techniques I have been using to get my paper ready on time are taking time out of the day to do the things necessary for my paper. For example, I've been getting my sources together by reading them in their entirety and vetting them. If I don't read them now, when it's time for me to include them into my paper, I may get stuck if I find out it's not a good source for my paper. I've also been writing a little bit of the paper each day so that I do not end up rushing or trying to complete it all on one day close to its due date. I've also been having what I have written so far proofread as I go.

I find these techniques helpful since I have 2 other papers to write that are due on the same day as this class's. This also helps me with time management, because I sometimes have trouble managing my time when there are so many things happening at once. Doing these techniques also allows me to have writer's block without worry since I still have a couple more days before it is due.
