

JeanBaptiste Lamisere

TH605 NA History of Christianity

Professor Louis A. DeCaro

Dated 04/11/2023

QUESTIONS

1. Who were the churches that grew rapidly in the newly settled land in the nineteenth century?
2. What was the greatest challenge facing the churches?
- 3 Where did the great revival break in 1906?
4. Who was the first Protestant theologian to respond by reinterpreting the faith?
5. When was the great penetration of Protestantism?

Answers

1. The Baptiste and the Methodis were the churches that grew rapidly in the nineteenth century.
2. The matter of slavery was the greatest challenge facing the churches.
3. The great revival broke out in 1906 in the Azusa Street Mission in Los Angeles.
4. Friedrich Schleiermacher was the first theologian to respond by reinterpreting the faith.
5. The nineteenth century was the great penetration of Protestantism.

TERMS

Revival: It became a customary periodical celebration in many churches.

Syllabus of Errors: Condemn many modern ideals of democracy, freedom of thought, and religious liberty.

Holiness Churches: Groups that underscored the Wesleyan theme of sanctification.

SUMMARY

The introductory of chapter eight is on the nineteenth century. It was a century of modernity with a series of political upheavals which opened the way for the ideals of democracy. The independence of the United States assured the separation of church and state. The Baptist and the Methodist churches grew rapidly and set the pattern of the second great awakening known as the Revivals. During that time, The most significant challenge facing the church was slavery, which led to civil war. The Pentecostal movement is derived from a revival in the Azusa Street Mission in Los Angeles that led to various denominations, such as Mormons, Jehovah's Witnesses, and Christian Science. Friederich reinterpreted the faith and expressed the need for a feeling of God's absolute independence. The great penetration of Protestantism in Latin America also took place in the nineteenth century, when the protestant church was built on a solid foundation.