What are my thoughts on my topic for the upcoming research paper? Be as specific as you can in thinking about your topic, but do not worry if your writing fumbles around a bit.

I believe college writing is in its own category of writing because of the intensity of words and phrases needed to connect to your reader, it's more of a broad audience tuned in than an average kid or lower level person would be. From my experience so far (being that i'm a freshman) I noticed that the workload along with duration of class was a little different than high school. Although I took college courses in highschool such as Ap literature and Ap seminar it did not prepare me for these classes that I'm taking now. Not to say that they're the most challenging but as I said before the workload is gruesome.
