Foreknowledge, Predestination, and Freewill

Throughout the Christian community, questions arise about whether God knows all or not. The question should be easy; however, it is not some have a hard time believing that God knows all based on whether we have free will and others have a hard time believing that our lives are predetermined. Will one's beliefs in predestination, foreknowledge, and free will contradict one other? We can look to the scriptures for answers along with different perspectives on this issue and find that there is an easy answer to it all.

Works Cited

Stanglin, Keith D., and Thomas H. McCall. "S M Baugh and the Meaning of Foreknowledge: Another Look." Trinity Journal, vol. 26, no. 1, Spr 2005, pp. 19–31. EBSCOhost, search.ebscohost.com/login.aspx?direct=true&db=rfh&AN=ATLA0001626213&site=ehost-live.

Works Cited

Toga, James Partee, and Annang Asumang. "The Interface Between the Doctrines of Divine Foreknowledge and Human Free Will: Judas Iscariot as a Test Case." Conspectus, vol. 27, Mar. 2019, pp. 160–72. EBSCOhost, search.ebscohost.com/login.aspx?direct=true&db=rfh&AN=ATLAiG0V191031000851&site=ehost-live.

Works Cited

Tinker, Christopher. "God's Foreknowledge and Prophecy: A Case Study in Logical Indeterminism and Compatibilism Part 1." Churchman, vol. 118, no. 1, Spr 2004, pp. 9–25. EBSCOhost, search.ebscohost.com/login.aspx?direct=true&db=rfh&AN=ATLA0001582030&site=ehost-live.

Works Cited

Wallace, Kent. "Predestination as Divine Foreknowledge: Its Dual Perspectives and Implications for Grace and Human Freedom in the Thought of Saint Anselm." The Saint Anselm Journal, vol. 16, no. 1, Fall 2020, pp. 1–28. EBSCOhost, search.ebscohost.com/login.aspx?direct=true&db=rfh&AN=ATLAiG0V220815000488&site=ehost-live.