

Ariele D'Amil
Research and Writing Assignment
Week #12
Dr. O'Hara

For this assignment I chose to compare and contrast New York City (USA), Rio De Janeiro (Brazil, South America), Mexico City (Mexico), Tokyo (Japan), Shanghai (China), Lagos (Nigeria, Africa), London (England), and Mumbai (India). I chose these cities as they are different cities all over the world. I wanted to compare the population of each of these cities, the overall weather of these cities (do the seasons typically change temperature), and the religion for the majority of the people living in that city.

The first way I compared these cities was by the overall weather. Now after doing some research I found out that most of these cities don't typically have snow other than New York but they still will get very cold in the winter months. These cities are New York, Shanghai, Tokyo and London. As for Rio de Janeiro, Mexico City, Lagos and Mumbai the temperature doesn't usually fluctuate that drastically and will typically have a rainy season instead.

The second way I compared these cities was by population. I did over 20 million people and less than 20 million people. Before looking these numbers up I suspected that the countries in Asia would be more populated than the other countries. I was particularly right as Mumbai and Shanghai had over 20 million people but I was wrong as Tokyo only has 14 million people and Mexico City has 22 million people.

The third and final way I compared these cities was by the religion of the majority of the people living in that city. After I compared these I wasn't too surprised by the majority of the religion but I was surprised with how close some of the numbers were for the different religions for that area. To me this just shows how much religion has spread around the world and how more tolerant countries have become with other religions.
