Making a written paper utilizes our capacity to evaluate for critical thought as well as our writing skills for academic purposes. It is important that we write clearly, and don't use fragments. Honestly, I usually sum up articles. But this time the techniques I used was, first, defining my argument. It is important to know what our argument is going to be. Make sure to put it in focus. Second, is to organize your thoughts. It must be connected and still in line with your topic. And lastly, cite sources or evidence that are based on the professors instruction. Also check citations to make sure that they are accurate and complete.
