

Abigail Cesar

Professor O'Hara

HIS114

18 April 2023

Hypothetical Society

My upbringing in a North American state that embraced trilingualism has been a singular experience. As a child, I acquired fluency in English, Spanish, and French, an accomplishment that afforded me a heightened awareness of the world's linguistic and cultural richness. Living in a society that upholds and reveres the customs and dialects of all cultures has indelibly influenced my perspective on international affairs.

Being fluent in three languages as a citizen of this state, I possess a deep comprehension of ethnic conflicts and the significance of safeguarding cultural identity. I have been instilled with the values of acknowledging and honoring the distinctive experiences and hardships of diverse communities. This has fueled my passion for creating more inclusive and diverse societies and has amplified my empathy towards the struggles of minority communities globally. I am driven to advocate for social justice and equality as a result of these experiences.

Although the state prioritizes trilingualism, separatist factions still exist, aiming to segregate people by language and culture. Personally, having been raised in an inclusive society that cherishes diversity, I cannot condone such movements. To establish a fairer and more harmonious society, it's crucial to embrace our unique qualities and collaborate towards shared objectives.

In my estimation, the concept of a trilingual North American state is commendable. It subverts conventional perceptions of nation-states, providing a more comprehensive and diverse outlook of society. This hypothetical situation does not contradict my personal principles, but instead fortifies my belief in acknowledging and honoring the variety present in our world.